ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A distributed simulation system may include a plurality of nodes arranged to perform a simulation of a system under test. The plurality of nodes are configured to communicate simulation commands and signal values for the system under test using message packets transmitted between the plurality of nodes. At least one of the plurality of nodes is configured to log the message packets in one or more log files during the simulation.